

Check out blackpower-
bottomtext, sssscavvv,
and unionizedmemes
on instagram for the
dankest memes

memé Žiņe

Check out blackpower-
bottomtext, sssscavvv,
and unionizedmemes
on instagram for the
dankest memes

memé
Žiņe

seen the corporate built memes made by a bunch of 50 year old, white, men who think they can make Dank Memes alongside the true Meme lords of our generation. Those memes suck. Like objectively are shit. The only reason those memes get popular is because the kids are making a meme out of them. Corporations need to understand, we aren't laughing with them we're laughing at them.

I'm at that age were I didn't really grow up with vine, or ever have it on my phone, but I've watched enough "vines that cure my depression" to feel like I did. Either way I'm a big fan of memes. I think they're extremely entertaining and a great way to ignore the crippling anxiety those memes get popular is because the kids are making a meme out of them. Corporations need to understand, we aren't laughing with them we're laughing at them.

I'm at that age were I didn't really grow up with vine, or ever have it on my phone, but I've watched enough "vines that cure my depression" to feel like I did. Either way I'm a big fan of memes. I think they're extremely entertaining and a great way to ignore the crippling anxiety those memes get popular is because the kids are making a meme out of them. Corporations need to understand, we aren't laughing with them we're laughing at them.

is an observable divide in the base beliefs of ideology of the youngest generations. There is an observable divide in the base beliefs of Gen Z/Millennial kids and the Baby Boomer up generations. We grew up in a society that shunned our identities, failed us politically, and tried to pass off a system designed to keep us in our place as "broken". Well Memes are here to actually break the system. We've all is an observable divide in the base beliefs of ideology of the youngest generations. There is an observable divide in the base beliefs of Gen Z/Millennial kids and the Baby Boomer up generations. We grew up in a society that shunned our identities, failed us politically, and tried to pass off a system designed to keep us in our place as "broken". Well Memes are here to actually break the system. We've all

