free press call

free press call to all curators and exhibitors at the 17th venice architecture biennale submission date: 23 april 2021

the free press call is addressed to all curators and exhibitors participating in the 17th venice architecture biennale who may wish to contribute articles, letters, or any other type of text for putting together a newspaper to be distributed by the cyprus pavilion – anachoresis: upon inhabiting distances (curated by marina christodoulidou, era savvides, nasios varnavas and evagoras vanezis).

the newspaper is conceived as an object-activator for the pavilion's architectural proposition (a scaled-up table), and is meant to initiate a dialogue on recent events that have affected architecture, public and domestic space, living conditions, cohabitation, the commons and so on. these events can be political, social, infrastructural, and should be of particular relevance to your local context. the call stems from the curatorial aim to gather a diverse body of textual and visual information, in search of a common ground for the inhabitation of distances, nurtured by the biennale context.

this free press project is realised in collaboration with phileleftheros newspaper, the leading press and publishing organisation in cyprus, and is designed by studio lin. the newspaper will be available for free at the cyprus pavilion. on the occasion of the biennale inauguration, phileleftheros will also disseminate it in cyprus as a supplement to its sunday edition.

if you wish to participate, please send us an existing or unpublished text or article (american english) written by a member of your team, collectively, or by an appointed contributor. contributors may submit texts of various lengths, with 500–700 words given as a loose guideline. the texts could be accompanied by up to three high-res images.
